Career Corner

Job Search Bootcamp - July 18

Generally students, upon graduation, expect to do any number of things. This may include travelling, starting a career or continuing their education. At the very least, they expect to leave campus. But for some, Montclair State takes on a new meaning, as they decide to pursue a career at Montclair State. Some begin work right here following graduation, while others find their way back after some time away from their alma mater. As the largest employer of Montclair State graduates, the University has over 500 alumni employees. They hold a number of different positions, from deans to administrators, to faculty and much more. Prestigious Dance Research Fellowships Awarded to Montclair State Professor and Student

Montclair State MFA student Emmanuèle Phuon and dance faculty member Apollinaire Scherr have been named 2019 New York Public Library for the Performing Arts Dance Research Fellows. They were chosen from a record number of applicants from around the world, who submitted research proposals that draw on the rich collections of the Jerome Robbins Dance Division. Scherr and Phuon are among the researchers whose work will help celebrate the 75th anniversary of the library's Dance Division – which is the world's largest and most comprehensive archive devoted to the documentation of dance. Montclair State University Names Robert Chesney Director of Intercollegiate Athletics

Robert Chesney '90 has been appointed director of Intercollegiate Athletics at Montclair State University following a national search, effective June 24, 2019. Chesney had served as interim athletics director after longtime athletic director Holly Gera retired in December of 2018. He takes over the role at a watershed moment for Montclair State University Athletics. The University has grown to become New Jersey's second-largest university. It has launched more than 80 new graduate programs, built outstanding new facilities and has been designated as both a New Jersey public research university and a national research doctoral institution. Matthew Khan '15, '17MS

Nature always has fascinated Matthew Khan '15, '17 MS. Prior to attending Montclair State, Khan studied fine arts at Raritan Valley Community College. That's where an environmental science class that required a beach cleanup at Sandy Hook Gateway National Recreation Area opened his eyes. Khan was in complete disbelief of the amount of plastic polluting the ocean. That moment changed his life, and he was determined to be involved in environmental protection. With a specific interest in microplastic, Khan transferred to Montclair State as a marine biology and coastal sciences major. [\[View full story\]](#)
